

Myungshik Kim

Imperial College London
South Kensington Campus - London SW7 2AZ, United Kingdom
m.kim@imperial.ac.uk

Nanomechanical oscillators to probe the minimal length scale

Minimal scales in length and time have been discussed in various contexts of physics. In particular, large-scale interferometers have been built in search of the minimal length scale. In this talk, we will consider nanomechanical oscillators as a candidate to probe the minimal length scale. Some other works on quantum nanomechanical oscillators are also introduced.